Who's Who Names Jessie Spends Weekend 10 Pct. Senior Class For 1951

Thirteen Jessies were recently given membership in the Who's Who among Students in American Colleges and Universities. These thirteen girls are all seniors and residents of Georgia.

The students are chosen from colleges and Universities all over America on the basis of Scholarship, leadership, personality and extra-curricular activities. On the GSCW campus the members were chosen from the senior class taking 10 percent. The members of the class voted on their classmates and a faculty group went over the decisions of the ballot.

Three Covington girls were elected to the group. Huanne Aiken Burnett, Martha Jane Durden, and Delores Davis, are all outstanding seniors touching all the requirements and participating in various college activities. Huanne is President of the College Government Association, church worker, and wife. Martha Jane is Wesley Foundation worker and does wonders in the Visual Aids department as well as steer the Psychology club. Delores is a "Y" cabinet member in charge of Current Affairs, Student Council member and also Wesley Foundation worker.

Barbara Johnson, Jefferson, is tiny but charming president of Sanford and the Senior class. She is a very efficient member of the Distributive education club.

Billie Hiers, Moultrie, is a Capella pres. and also CGA head of Fine Arts. Sidelines for Billie are Phi Sigma and Phoenix. Also from Moultrie is the two year president.

Jessie Spends Weekend With 1892 Ex-Jessie

By JUNE NETZEL

Spending the week-end with a GSCW alumna may or may not be a very exciting or interesting experience. It all depends on who the ex-Jessie is, but if she is Mrs. C. R. Allen, of Gainesville, at her house on Lake Burton, then you can't help but have a good time. Any sweet, fragile-looking little lady of 75 who will help you roll three 100-gallon barrels into a motor boat, and then show you how to start the motor definitely has my vote, and that is just what Mrs. Allen did.

It has been 58 years since Mrs. Allen, then Alice Rice of Forsythe County, was a student at G.N.I.C. At that time the school was only three years old, and there were only three buildings on the campus. When I asked Mrs. Allen what year she graduated, she surprised me with "I didn't graduate—I 'quituated' to get married!" but then Mrs. Allen, in true Jessie spirit is full of surprises. She beat me 2 games out of three at Canasta.

Eighteen hundred ninety-two was the year of the typhoid fever epidemic at G.N.I.C., and since no protection against typhoid fever had been discovered yet, the school had a hard time taking care of all its students. Mrs. Allen was fortunate enough to come through the epidemic unharmed, but many others were not so fortunate. Her room-mate, Nettie Barnes, died of the fever on the way home.

However, not all of Mrs. Allen's college memories are sad ones. She remembers working in the dining room and getting snacks from the cooks to take back to her room. Of course, she wasn't supposed to do this and so she had to slip the cookies or whatever she had inside her blouse to escape detection. One trip to the dorm after dinner was an especially fast one. She was carrying some cornbread that was just a little too warm for comfort. She also had some of the same troubles that we Jessies have now. One night her housemother saw her in the first-floor hall in her robe and consequently her parents received a letter saying that their Alice had been given a demerit "for appearing in the hall improperly dressed." Although she can look back and laugh at the incident now, at the time it wasn't at all funny. "After all," reflects Mrs. Allen, "improperly dressed" could have meant anything to my folks when they got that letter."

If a 75 I am a spry, charming and witty as Mrs. Allen, then I know that I will be doubly glad that I picked Jessie as my school.

JOHN JACOB NILES was born in Louisville and grew up in Jefferson County, Ky. His early musical education came from his father, who was a singer of ballads and a caller of square-dances, and from his mother, who was a church organist and taught her son to play the piano. By the time he was 15, he had taught himself the trick of musical shorthand and had started writing down folk music—the ballads his father sang, the Negro spirituals he heard in Louisville's Cabbage Patch.

His great collecting days began in 1910, when he was 18 years old, and continued until 1917, when he enlisted in the U. S. Air Corps. After the war, as a student at the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music, he began the organization and arrangement of this vast body of material. Another long collecting period began in 1927 and continued through 1934. By then, he had covered every county in the Southern Appalachians, and his collection was the largest in the English-speaking world. G. Schirmer and Carl Fischer have published a large portion of this collection, in both solo and choral form, and RCA-Victor has recorded a part of it on Red Seal records.

John Jacob Niles' concerts have won acclaim from Finland and Estonia all the way across the world to Vancouver. He is the only folk singer living today who has never rused material from any collection but his own—just as he uses only dulcimers of his own making for accompaniment. As Charles O'Connell, formerly in charge of Victor's Red Seal Division has put it—he is "the unique American troubadour whom no imitator has yet successfully imitated."

In addition to his countless music publications, Niles has found time to do a number of books—"One Man's War," the story of the Lafayette Escadrille in World War I, "Singing Soldiers," containing the music of the Negro regiments in that same war, and "Songs My Mother Never Taught Me," in collaboration with Douglas Moore—the title of which is self-explanatory.

On his farm near Lexington, Ky., Niles is presently at work on an oratorio, which he hopes to complete in between concert tours. Recently, the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music awarded him an honorary Doctor of Music degree. His ambition—still unfilled—is to find a little time in which to paint pictures.

A Look Into The Future— Golden Slipper 1960

The Golden Slipper Contest was the most outstanding event since the event in 1950. The principles of the event being the same as the last decade, brought the class of 1950, husbands and children, to the campus for Homecoming.

1950 was the first year the senior class had attempted a parade with the seniors 15 cars decorated in colors of lavender and purple, green and white. This year, the 280 seniors paraded in Macon each with a new jet with class decorations. The new senior hall to accommodate the overflow of students was erected on campus and finished in time for the class of '51 to be at the Homecoming open house. The front campus is now the senior landing field.

The faculty had the idea of dispensing with all classes for the week, what with all the girls so tied up with Golden Slipper work that they wouldn't be able to attend anyway. Each faculty member gave the students in her class a pair of golden slippers to wear during the week, along with the special class color uniforms issued by the college and laundered every night by the college laundry, for free.

The seniors were not the only classes to have a parade. All the classes decorated floats and paraded through Milledgeville for the benefit of the townspeople.

This is the first year that we will use the new Auditorium for the event. The administration decided that for the crowds obtained even with the $6.00 admission charges that the seating capacity was not at all adequate.

(The concerts, appreciation hours, and lectures are still in Russell.)

On Friday night after the winner was announced there was a mass meeting of all classes and guests in the formal garden for a small atomic explosion and spontaneous fireworks, provided by the office of the Bursar.

Every member of the faculty and each student helped make the event a success.

Religious Emphasis Week 1952 Dates Changed

At a recent meeting of the CCRA the group decided to send an invitation to the Christian Missions team for the next Religious Emphasis Week.

Realization of the need of a change in the program was discussed by the Council. They agreed that the study should begin on Sunday and continue through Saturday. This year's program was closed too soon, leaving many students with their problems to be thought out among themselves, and putting a greater burden on the student.

Next year's program will also give more continuity, and be centered around a theme that is pertinent to the student body.

Reverend John Hughston told the group of the evaluations that some of his freshman dorm groups gave. The freshmen thought the lack of faculty cooperation should have been tackled and that was no time to give tests.

One freshman stated, "If these faculty members are big enough to be here at all, they should realize this is not the time to give tests." The freshmen were looking for a faith to live by, and many of them are still muddling that question in their minds. They were not made to believe these speakers' doctrines, but were questioned about their own beliefs, and made to wonder about them.

As to dates for the week next year the group decided to change the program to the last week in January. The week will not interrupt Golden Slipper activities, mid-term quizzes, and yet will be after some of the important questions are aroused in the freshman Social Science courses offered fall quarter.

Chapel will be conducted every day of that week. This plan would leave the afternoons and evenings free for dorm discussions and forums.

Delores Wheeler suggested that there should be more group singing and playing together. Dr. Wells is backing the CCRA and YWCA in joining hands to help next year to really BE a Religious Emphasis Week.

A Letter From Jessie Belle

Dear Mother:

I am in the infirmary. You probably don't know what that is, so I will tell you. The name is Parks Memorial and it is in one corner of the campus. Some girl told me it was where you went when you didn't want to go to class and didn't have another cut. The food and snacks on the hour are wonderful.

I'm gaining weight and feeling better than I have this year. My temperature is 98.2 so I will be here not less than two months since my illness is only minor. I didn't know whether I should come here or not, but I bit all my nails off and pulled my eyebrows too thin, so I thought I had better have this checked. Oh, I also cut my bangs too short.

Immediately upon seeing the doctor, or the doctor seeing me, he diagnosed my case and gave me the new miracle drug, Hadacol. It really does the trick. I can't wait to give you my face-to-face testimonial for this prescription. Also supplementing the drug is 16 pink pills and anywhere from 6-8 aspirins each day.

The girl next door has an abscessed tooth. I heard her screaming this morning when the nurse on duty woke her at 3 a.m. to bandage her left leg. The girl down the hall with the sprained leg got a shot of novocain the same hour. Really, do you think she should have waked us all up just because of that.

Mama, would you please send me one of those cute nylon pleated gowns with the negligees to match. Last year it didn't much matter how we looked but this year we have a doctor of the other sex. The girls usually dress up for him, so please send me some new nighties.

Love,

JESSIE BELLE

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR Open Letter To Honey And Sophomore

Dear Honey and Sophomore:

I hope you don't mind my writing you an open letter, but I have a few things to talk over with you, and as I don't know your P. O. Box number this seems to be the only way that I can get in touch with you. Then, too, since you can't read, maybe Evelyn Knight will read it to you since she is good friend of Honey's, and you can listen to it from her without feeling so embarrassed, since this is a little personal.

First, I would like to talk to you about the way you've been taking your lives in your hands—paws, I mean, lately, running out in front of cars. Not only is it dangerous, but it slows down traffic, which may or may not be a good thing. But let's get back to the main issue.

Honey, I know that you think that cars are just gret big, overgrown dogs, and all you want to do is run up and sniff their front tires to see if your mother would approve of them. That is a very friendly motive, and I think that it is very nice that you are following the GSCW tradition of friendliness, but it is still dangerous. As for you, Sophomore, I am not so sure that your motives are not slightly ulterior. I have seen you chase a car on the sly and growl at it when you thought nobody was looking. I am ashamed of you. That is not polite at all.

And not only are you endangering yourselves, but is very upsetting to the nice college girls, who pet you so much when you show off in such a manner. I think two or three of them have had near hysterics, and I, myself, have acquired a whole set of grey hairs that weren't put there by term papers alone. And you, Honey, should especially be careful, if only for Evelyn's sake. Don't forget, she's putting you through college, and she's invested too much money in you for you to go out and get yourself killed at this late date.

All I can say is, I'm thoroughly ashamed of both of you, and you should be ashamed, too. It's the talk of the whole student body, how you're carrying on.

There's another point I want to discuss with you. I think it's perfectly wonderful, the interest you both have shown in chapel. I don't think there are two more loyal chapel supporters on campus. But, you let your enthusiasm for the speaker run away with you just a little too much when you insist on trotting up on the stage to tell him how much you enjoyed his speech when he isn't even through yet. By the way, Sophomore, you've been cutting chapel lately. You'd better watch out, because you might get an overcut slip. You're no senior, you know.

Just for the record, Sophomore, I heard that you got your name by attending all the Sophomore Golden Slipper meetings last year. It looks like the name, Sophomore, has stuck to you, and you'll always be Sophomore, no matter who the Sophomores are—you don't answer to anything else.

By the way of being nice, I think I ought to congratulate you, Honey, on seeing that Religious Emphasis Week was so successful. I heard you practically ran the whole affair, staying at the "Y" Apartment during the entire week. I'm very proud of you, and I hope you're making some headway in converting Sophomores. I didn't even see him on campus that week.

You know, a word to the wise is sufficient, so please don't wag this away as if it were nothing. Everyone of us Jessies is depending on you, so please don't let us down.

With love from your fleabitten friend,

JESSIE

GIRLS

Can you pass this Beauty Test?

FREQUENT SHAMPOOING MAKES HAIR STRINGY.

TRUE ☐ FALSE ☐

Frequent shampooing with Wildroot Liquid Cream Shampoo, containing Lanolin, tends to make hair fluffy, beautifully soft. Hair appears stringy when dust and grime have dimmed its brightness.

HAIR SHOULD BE SHAMPOOED EVERY WEEK.

TRUE ☐ FALSE ☐

Weekly shampoos are a must. Many women with fine, silky or light colored hair clean their hair, gleam their hair with Wildroot Liquid Cream Shampoo at least every five days. Others shampoo before every date for glamorous, kissable hair.

NUMBER OF LATHERS DEPENDS ON YOU.

TRUE ☐ FALSE ☐

You can use one or more. First brush the hair thoroughly, then rinse with warm water in order to wet it. Then apply shampoo rubbing it through the hair and into the scalp. Rinse carefully. Then, if necessary, lather again and finally rinse thoroughly for hair that's gleaming bright.

HAIR SHOULD BE RUBBED DRY.

TRUE ☐ FALSE ☐

NO! Don't rub, just blot the hair with a heavy bath towel. Rubbing tends to snarl and tangle the locks. Blotting removes moisture just as quickly, leaves hair ready to brush and set. Try blotting your hair after a new Wildroot Liquid Cream Shampoo. For a generous trial supply, free, send this ad with your name and address to Dept. J, Wildroot Co., Inc., Buffalo 11, N.Y.

What The Freshman Found Searching For The Slipper

It's a strange experience to be told suddenly that something you had hardly heard of before is going to be the most important thing in your life for the next two weeks, but that is what happens to every Freshman at GSCW every year.

Unmentionables Mentioned

Gentlemen who flip through the pages of trade papers in the male-trapping industry, such as Vogue and Harper's Bazaar, are deterred in this casual practice by the shockingly frank advertising illustrations of intimate items of feminine merchandise.

A true gentleman would no more tarry in deliberate inspection of such gems of commercial art than he would pause after blundering accidentally upon an alarmed female stranger partially immersed in a bathtub off the guest room.

Let us then fend for ourselves. Let us boldly seize this menace of the most virulent boobball of modernity, the arch brassiere and—its companion harnesses, the sinister, sinuous girdle and corset of the predatory female. It is more than a hunch that these masquerade costumes for the female meat are doing more than any other factors in civilization to destroy man's faith in the finer things of life.

One advertisement points out, "Summer temperatures send up the sales of white foundation garments." This cannot be denied by the susceptible male who feels his temperature mounting to 112 degrees Fahrenheit because of the diabolically engineered creations of net, lace, broadcloth, rayon, voile, mesh, elastic, non-elastic, lastex and divers other materials.

You bump into an advertisement showing a lady—and there is no mistake about their being ladies in these pictures—attired scantily in a lacy outerhedge with more curves than a six-day bike race. This lady is drawing back a curtain and peeking in at a mixed party of people in formal evening wear. Such is one of the popular scenes in the printed annuals of the foundation garment business. It has the pleasant, companionable spirit of "company in the parlor girls."

Only on rare occasions, however, are the bust belly and behind business advertisements guilty of rang efrontery and contempt for the mar on the street. One such instance is that of a bra advertisement headed, "Seeing Is Believing" when as a matter of fact in this affair seeing isn't believing at all. But feeling wouldn't be believing either, and as the ad writer evidently wanted to be coldly professional rather than sensual about the affair, he just picket one of the five senses offhand, making the deadline, and took a long chance on some fellow finding out that seeing wasn't believing and carrying the case to the Better Business Bureau because of some tragic disappointment.

So, it all probably ends with the philosophical male concluding that the thoughtful thing for him to do is to keep his mouth shut, as the argot pertinently goes in this case, and be reconciled to the male minding his own business while the female minds hers, part of which plainly is in seeing that her contour is such that the discriminating gentleman is kept ignorantly aesthetically content with abreast of the times.

When new Jessies come, all we know about Golden Slipper is that it is a school tradition, and from there on in we're a little hazy. Then all of a sudden you're asked to help write the Freshman play, or work on the Costume committee, or make posters to carry out the theme which the class has chosen; and you think to yourself "Why did they ask me? I don't even know what Golden Slipper is all about. You start working anyway, if for no other reason than to be a good sport, and pretty soon you begin to realize the meaning of those two mysterious words Golden Slipper. Golden Slipper is a contest between the Freshmen and Sophomores. You learn this quickly along with all the details of the contest, but if this is all you learn about the Slipper, then you have a long way to go. The reason for Golden Slipper is to promote sportsmanship, fellowship and class spirit and to acquaint the sister classes with each other. I would also like to suggest working hard on a slipper committee as a sure-cure for homesickness. After about a week you'll almost forget that any other place in the world exists besides Jessie.

Now Golden Slipper is upon us and over we baffle, bewildered Freshmen not only know what it is all about, we have entered into the spirit completely, but wait—did we really know everything about the slipper, or did we have to wait until midnight Friday night for its full significance to hit us? After we knew who had won the slipper, it didn't really matter; what mattered and what we will remember for a long time is the fun we've had in the past two weeks, the new friends we have met, and maybe some new talents we've discovered; something more we've learned about sportsmanship—how to be good winners or good losers.

Kayser's Kneelast with the dainty bands of elasticized lace just above the knee. Stretches when you do—stretches the life of your sheer nylons, guards against garter strain. Day and evening sheers.

Sophs And Seniors Wear Slipper After Two Weeks Fitting

SENIORS STAGE PRE-CONTEST PARADE

The Sophomores and Seniors displayed their best foot and proved they had fitted it for the slipper on that Friday night.

This year's Golden Slipper contest marked the 16th annual event with better attendance than any previous year. The weekend was homecoming for 250 or more alumnae.

The sportsmanship was at a peak even before the week was at the end. The work put into the job by all four classes was a masterpiece that fitted into the puzzle called GSCW. The themes and everything connected to the contest were worked out into details that have never been surpassed.

The songs received more comment from the on lookers than any part of the contest itself. For the first time in Slipper history the audience applauded a song in the middle. When the sophs and seniors sang "Dry Bones" with their own words the audience was moved to rounds of applause before the song ended.

The most unique thing of the week was the song that everyone could sing, the "Golden Slipper Song." The flags of all classes and the slipper flag flew between Atkinson and Parks all week.
